ART TEAM DEFINED

From work from home, Falmouth Arts Centre, Falmouth, Cornwall. A collaboration between Falmouth Arts Centre and the School of Art, Design, and Media has resulted in an exhibition that celebrates the work of the school's art students. The exhibition, titled "Art Team Defined," opened on September 11, 2012, and runs until November 11, 2012.

The exhibition features work from a diverse range of students, showcasing their creative skills and abilities. The pieces on display range from traditional painting and drawing to more experimental forms of art, such as installation art and digital media.

The exhibition is part of a larger initiative by Falmouth Arts Centre to support and promote the work of local artists and designers. Through events such as this, the centre aims to foster a sense of community and collaboration among the creative community in Falmouth.

The exhibition is open to the public and admission is free. For more information, visit the Falmouth Arts Centre website or contact the centre directly.
An artist’s life on film

Film maker and Winter moving image tutor John Mandelberg first met the Israeli family in 2003. As he understood it, Yaniv was a different type of communicator.

He went to an exhibition of Yaniv’s in 2006 and bought two pieces of his art. Next thing, he heard Yaniv had been selected as a finalist in the Weizman National Contemporary Arts Award. The more unbelievable story.

Yaniv’s work was fast becoming known in the local art scene and he decided to approach the family about making a documentary.

Yaniv Schevitz the World was completed in 2011. Mandelberg estimates there were at least 34 hours of footage to work with and about 3,000 hours of editing.

He says the film is “about a family and how that family supports, nurtures and copes with, Yaniv’s life.”

Yaniv was diagnosed with Asperger’s syndrome – a high functioning form of autism – as a child. Social situations are a puzzle to him. He doesn’t always fit into the mainstream world, but as an artist, so far, he hasn’t needed to. He’s an Outsider Artist, Self taught.

“He has no understanding about the art theory and he can’t articulate why he paints. He does it because he knows people will pay for the work and it sells. It means he can buy the things that he likes.

“I don’t think you could actually teach him, because he has a really good colour sense that comes from within.”

His work is different. He can’t stand up and talk freely about it. He can’t defend his work. Mandelberg identifies a disconnect here between the ‘Yaniv is a very black and white person. He’s very either or, yes or no, with very little shades of grey in between.

With his art, he’s very colourful. You can see it.”

STEPHAN JAMISON

contemporary art world and what Yaniv does.

“Most artists can talk about the reasons they do the work. It is about the art, not about winning competitions. The interesting thing is that artists do want to sell their work, they just don’t want to say that.”

Yaniv’s brother Stephane sums up his brother’s life past painting.

“There were two things that caught my attention when Yaniv started painting. One is that with his words, Yaniv is a very black and white person. He has very either or, yes or no, with very little shades of grey in between. With his art, he’s very colourful. You can see it. It’s a way for him to express something that he just can’t do with language. It’s a way for him to say, Hey, look at me. This is a part of me that I haven’t been able to tell you about so far.”
